which was shored up with pine planking two inches thick and eight inches broad.

This was a clear violation of the building laws and was a duplication of the cause of the collapse of the building in Hanover street, a few months ago, in which three men were killed.

ONE OF THE INJURED MAY DIE.

The victim of the disaster was as follows:

THE DEAD.

LOUIS ARONSON, 33, of No. 6 Church street, Chelsea.

THE INJURED.

NICHOLAS PIERA, of No. 175 Salem street, Boston.

RODOLFO FANGAROS, of No. 28 Chatham street, Boston.

ANTONIO CAVINO, of No. 13 Charter street, Boston.

PLO DEGRILAND, of No. 18 Charter street, Boston.

JACOB SCHWARTZ, of No. 23 Bowdoin street, Boston.

Cavino was struck on the head and it was thought his skull was fractured. He was badly hurt but it is believed he could not recover.

What Made Building Fall.

The whole weight of the front part of the building rested on several small wooden props, or diaphragms. These props had crumpled under the strain on them, or slipped from the foundations. It is believed that the props were not properly secured, and that the building was not properly braced.

trial was piled on the shore while waiting for permanent foundation columns to be put in place. The building was not properly braced, and the props were not properly secured.

Four supports were in place on the two floors above, to make the building stable. The props were not properly secured, and the building was not properly braced.

Some of the props were made of pine boards, as seen by an examination of one which remained in position. The props were not properly secured, and the building was not properly braced.

GREEN CROSS DEATH PUZZLE

NEW HAVEN, Ct., May 10.—Failure to act of investigating clerk made the police feel that in the case of "The Man with the Green Cross," as it is now called, they have a tragic mystery worthy of the best interest of a Sherlock Holmes.

Discovery that the "Man with the Green Cross," whose body was found in Whalley avenue woods, had $1,000 in his pockets, instead of $200 as at first reported, heightened the interest in the case.

There is speculation whether the man is a soldier or victim of an assassin. He was shot to death. A revolver was found by the body. The medical examiner says he is a mark which still eludes identification.

But, above the interest in the man's identity, is even the speculation as to his death, since the question of identity. Through the mystery of the man's name thus the sinister suggestion of the green cross.

Green Cross on Wrist.
It is because the police found tattooed on the man's right wrist a small green cross. They feel that in this cross they have a mark which still eludes identification.

This cross is small, not over an inch either way. It is not a dull or faded blue, or a bluish green. It is green. Sailors, who are more prone to tattooing than other men, are almost always marked in blue ink, sometimes with reddish patterns for contrast.

Their pet designs are ships, anchors, mermaids and their native stars, with a cross occasionally figuring. But it is not the usual seafaring figure. The figure in the New Haven case is a small, green cross, distinctly odd, and tattooed on the right wrist. It suggests marks the members of some foreign society than the vanity of a sailor.

The dead man, the police believe, is of dark complexion, the straight, classical nose and the clean facial quality of the Greek. Why a Greek should have a green cross tattooed on his right wrist is what puzzles the police.

A Sherlock Holmes, might evolve from the body from the cross and from a few articles found on the man, a complete identification.

In Man's Pockets.
It looked, at first, as though identification would be simple. The man, about thirty-five years old, wore a coat bearing the initials "J. O. J." in the pockets were three silver half dollars, a gold watch, a ball bearing, a bunch of keys and a black wallet.

In the wallet and also separate in other pockets were found $1,000 in bills. Some of the bills were in packages, neatly held in the folds of the man's clothing. The money was of the First National Bank of Manchester, N. H.

A bankkeeper here the laundry mark "J. O. J." immediately it was suggested that the man was from Manchester, N. H., that the initials were "J. O. J." and that he was a customer of J. Pierrien, tailor.

But Pierrien, the Manchester, N. H., tailor, who has been questioned, says he has no customer with the initials "J. O. J." there are two men of Manchester, N. H., who are known as "J. O. J." and who are active and accounted for. The Manchester bank can give no clue.

Who Cut Out Tag?
Pierrien suggested that the police look for the white tag tailor sew into the inside breast pocket of every customer's coat with the customer's full name on it, but the medical examiner reports to such tag. Pierrien says that if the coat bears the label it must have come from his shop and that if it was made by him it surely had the name sewed into the breast pocket.

That leaves the deduction, one possible even to an amateur sleuth, that the manning was cut out of the man's coat.

It is this, he who cut out the name-tag from the coat of the man with the green cross before he shot himself? Or does it show that the man was not the man with the green cross?

Who removed it did it so skillfully that not even marks of stitching remain. The mystery provokes public curiosity. The facts of Sherlock Holmes, the master of deduction, are being mentioned in connection with the "Green Cross" mystery.

What Would Holmes Do?
The tale of the English gentleman, formerly a householder in Australia, who was frightened into unconsciousness when shot by a woman figure, from a fatal mark on his wrist, suggesting of the post office, is being told.

The man with the gold-filled tooth was another character who fell victim to "Homer's" unerring deductions.

In the store of Silver Street, the clothing horse at King's Pelard, Holmes noticed a slight likeness in some there in the yard. This was one of the clues which led to the solving the mystery of the "Green Cross."

KIDNEY TROUBLE
"The Red Headed League" was another mystery which puzzled the police. It was merely a key to help Holmes unlock a mystery and tell a long hanging tale.

The police say that the man with the green cross is a Greek, is found shot dead in woods off a main thoroughfare. He was about 35 years old, from a well known bank. His initials may be "J. O. J." He wore a coat labeled by a tailor. But the tailor has no such customer.

TAFT DESERTED BY ROOT IN THE OHIO CAMPAIGN

By JAMES J. MONTAGUE.
WASHINGTON, May 10.—Mr. Taft made his last ditch fight in Ohio next week without any help from Ellis Root. Root was advertised throughout Ohio as "Romeo" Taft's Secretary of State who will speak against him from the platform. But at the eleventh hour, convinced that Taft is a loser, he has refused to leave Washington.

This is merely additional proof of the fact that the reactionaries are deserting Taft. Of all the Cabinet officers and Senators advertised for the grand Taft procession, only Secretary of State and Senators Burton and Townsend will appear.

Mr. Taft has been compelled to fall back on his brother Charles for money to pay the bills, and on S. C. Layton and finally to the party for political advice. Last night he was given a good deal of rest by the new power, it is reported. He will lead the fight himself and keep it up to the last possible minute.

Flinn Assists Walter Brown.
Meanwhile William Flinn, the new Pennsylvania boss, is in Ohio counselling Walter Brown, the Roosevelt boss of that State, as to the best means of beating Taft.

It was learned that the Colonel, who will make his first speech in Canton, President McKinley's home town, will charge that President Taft appointed Judge Archbald, now under investigation at the instance of Penrose.

It will be further charged by the Colonel that Taft, after abundant opportunities to find out all about Archbald, kept him on the bench. The reactionaries, however, Archbald brought out at the House investigation in preparing this speech.

It was also learned that the President, Mr. Roosevelt will have Controller Frederick of New York, Governor Bradley of Pennsylvania, Governor Shinn and Governor of New York, Governor Bradley of New York, and his manager, Senator Dixon.

All these small arms will keep up a rapid fire while the Roosevelt forces. Each gun is in action. Never before was there such a political invasion of a State.

Taft Returns Discouraged.
President Taft returned from Ohio deeply discouraged. He has at least Business Notice.

GERTRUDE LAIRD, WHO HAS LEADING PART IN DRAMA

BLOCKTON, May 10.—Miss Gertrude Laird, one of the prettiest girls of the high school, has been selected to play the leading character in the farce drama, "A Bachelor's Romance," to be given by the senior class of the school, May 24. For many years the position of leading lady in the class play at the high school has been a coveted one, and the competition for the honor has been keen. During the entire four years which she has spent in the high school, Miss Laird has been regarded as one of the leading students.

Among the other students who will have prominent parts in the play are: Aileen Foster, Miss Frances Cullen, Herbert Polley, Lloyd Crowder, Harold Smith, Leroy Churchill and Lawrence Barrett. The players are being coached by Robert Burrows.

PREDICT CLARK ON FIRST VOTE

WASHINGTON, May 10.—It looks as though Speaker Champ Clark would have enough delegates when the Democratic National convention convenes in Baltimore to insure his nomination on the first ballot. His friends are confident he will win on the first vote taken.

The latest figures of trusted delegates in the United States show Clark strong lead over his nearest competitor, William Wilson, and nearly as good a delegation as the six other candidates allied in the figures to be given only the first vote.

The twelve delegations in Pennsylvania are expected to vote with Clark and four states' district delegates are not taken into account because of the fact that their aid is in doubt.

Clark's instructed delegates to date number 228. The delegates in Pennsylvania are expected to vote with Clark and four states' district delegates are not taken into account because of the fact that their aid is in doubt.

Desperate Desmond

Too Much Light for the Villain, But He Laughs Last After All

Copyright, 1912, by the NATIONAL NEWS ASSOCIATION

By Hershfield

I—THE CHASE IN THE DARK.
Desmond, the notorious international crook, has the beautiful Rosamond in his power and is making her to a place lovely captive. Our hero goes back to never hope to escape with Rosamond, but at night his chances were excellent, and now the sudden glare of the burning oil tank makes the streets as light as day.

II—THE BLAZING TANK.
Curse! Desmond, like all evil-doers, never hopes to escape with Rosamond, but at night his chances were excellent, and now the sudden glare of the burning oil tank makes the streets as light as day.

III—IN THE GLARE.
Curse! Desmond, like all evil-doers, never hopes to escape with Rosamond, but at night his chances were excellent, and now the sudden glare of the burning oil tank makes the streets as light as day.

IV—THE STARTLED PLOTTERS.
And the light disturbs not Desmond alone, but a lot of others. A number of thieves, each carrying his tame bomb, had gathered under cover of night and were plotting to put the kibosh on the government. The sudden glare caused them to believe they had been discovered by the Czar's secret police.

V—HURVING BOMBS.
As the nightlies earnestly drop all their bombs in the general rush for safety, "Claude Exquisite" beats himself in the midst of a large crowd of explosions. It takes a brave man to remain calm in such circumstances, and brave as Claude, undoubtedly, he determines to take it out on that he is a nightlie. His fate will be the rule for safer and less airy quarters, shown tomorrow.

VI—IN THE CLUTCH OF THE Czar.
"You the hero!" cries Rosamond. Desmond, "and Claude Exquisite is unbreakable!" The villain chuckles as he sees the deed. He had planned a secret police arrest Claude in the name of the Czar. His presence among the exploding bombs is taken as proof that he is a nightlie. His fate will be the rule for safer and less airy quarters, shown tomorrow.

The Railroad? or the People?

Governor Foss Must Choose Between Them Should the State Legislature Send to the Executive Offices Mr. Mellen's Merger Bill—We HOPE the Governor Will Choose Wisely.

It cannot have escaped the notice of the business interests of this Commonwealth that the New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad gets better service at the Massachusetts State House than business men obtain there.

The manufacturers and merchants of Massachusetts are still waiting—or they were waiting last night—for some indication of what the Schoonmaker-Wolcott Railroad Committee purposes to do about having the Grand Trunk Railway come to the port of Boston.

The Grand Trunk bill was referred to the Railroad Committee at the State House MORE THAN THREE MONTHS AGO.

Shippers came from all over the Commonwealth to urge this Grand Trunk bill. On nine different days came the representatives of chambers of commerce, boards of trade and commercial clubs. THE LAST PUBLIC HEARING WAS HELD FIVE WEEKS AGO.

Early in the agitation for another railroad for the port of Boston the AMERICAN forecasted exactly what has come to pass—the holding up of the Grand Trunk bill until the closing days of the session.

In this case, observe, we had the merchants of Massachusetts seeking relief from the Legislature.

CONTRAST THE BOTTLING UP OF THE GRAND TRUNK BILL, DESIRED BY MERCHANTS AND MANUFACTURERS, WITH WHAT HAPPENS WHEN MR. MELLEN'S MONOPOLY WANTS THINGS AT THE STATE HOUSE.

Mr. Mellen wants to lease the Boston & Maine Railroad to the New Haven. In five months exactly the bill that Mr. Mellen wants is REPORTED BY THE SAME RAILROAD COMMITTEE which for many weeks has been trying to devise the most workable way NOT to give the shippers of the Commonwealth the relief they must have.

Governor Foss, you will remember, was willing to let Mr. Mellen take over the Boston & Maine, provided that, at the same time, the Legislature would PASS A PUBLIC UTILITIES BILL.

A Public Utilities bill would place the regulation of railroads, railways, gas and electric light companies and telephone and telegraph companies in the hands of a Public Utilities Commission.

THE CORPORATIONS DO NOT WANT THAT.

The Railroad Committee seems to be of the opinion that Governor Foss is HALF-WAY RIGHT. The Railroad Committee likes THAT HALF OF THE FOSS PLAN WHICH WOULD GIVE MR. MELLEN WHAT HE WANTS.

It seems to be the prevailing opinion at the State House that sooner or later the Legislature will send to Mr. Foss a bill authorizing the lease of the Boston & Maine to the New Haven. The Legislature will be mum about a Public Utilities Commission.

If we were in the Legislature—even if we had to stand alone there—we should strenuously object to ANY LEGISLATION THAT MR. MELLEN WANTS, for his own ends, UNTIL MR. MELLEN'S TRAINED REPRESENTATIVES UP THERE HAVE TAKEN THEIR HANDS FROM THE GRAND TRUNK BILL, DEMANDED OF THE SHIPPERS OF THE STATE AND VITALLY NECESSARY IF THE DEVELOPMENT OF THE PORT OF BOSTON IS EVER GOING TO AMOUNT TO MORE THAN WELSH CHOSTEN WORDS.

And if we were in Governor Foss' place, when this Boston & Maine merger bill comes to the Executive desk—well, we should remember what happened to Eben S. Draper, who was a good friend to the railroad.

A Great Automobile Feat for Good Roads

"As the completion of the Apian way marked the high tide of human civilization, so all thoughtful men consider good highways as one of the very best investments in American civilization."

In these words Thomas B. Marshall, Governor of Indiana, endorses authoritatively Mr. Hearst for the Automobile Pathfinding Tour of the Los Angeles Examiner, seeking to establish the route of a great national highway across the Continent.

Automobiles and good roads have come to be almost synonymous. Not because automobiles are the chief beneficiaries, but because they are, in all the land, the most active, persistent and effective advocates of good roads.

There is no longer now an antagonism between the farmer and the automobile. They are a unit on road sentiment. Automobiles are now in almost every farmer's home between Pittsburgh and Omaha. They are now not only a luxury, but as everyday convenience and necessity, and have been proving in indicating a more harmonious adjustment between city and country. The Farmer's Union, the farmer and the individual farmer now vie with boards of trades, chambers of commerce, merchants, producers, lovers, as outdoor enthusiasts in advocacy of government help for good roads.

There is no policy that would be more popular with any party that hopes to run the government.

Mr. Hearst introduced in Congress in 1908 a bill to provide the payment by the government of one-half the expense of any public country road of more than ten miles in length, taking into account its public importance as a market road, a mail route or a highway between States. This law, or any modification of this law, rendered necessary by the changed conditions of today, the Hearst newspapers throughout the country had cordially supported.

There are 100,000 people leaving this country every year and spending $100,000,000 in Europe, led in part by the perfect public roads of England, France, Germany, Switzerland and Italy. We might keep this money at home if we had excellent highways between the even more interesting points of our great country.

And what a Summer or an Autumn outing would be that glorious trip on a great highway from ocean to ocean from Boston to Los Angeles!

The good roads movement is growing into tremendous strength; every good American should help it along.

∴ The Importance of Breathing Deeply ∴

By Ella Wheeler Wilcox.

Copyright, 1912, by American Journal Company

"THE properties that we have been wondering at and labeling as almost miraculous in the new element radium are possessed in small but measurable degree by the internal organs of our own bodies. Our brains are especially radio-active, the heart, liver, and the kidneys less so. As our means of detecting radio-activity becomes more delicate, we are discovering it in more and more natural objects and substances. How do our organs acquire it? From the food we eat, or from the air we breathe? We do not know; but possibly the latter alternative is more probable, since the lungs are very radio-active."

That is what science says about radium. Now, since science has spoken the word for this, perhaps the men and women who have given no heed to the voice of the seers will listen and learn the great FACT.

Quantity and Quality of Our Blood Depends on Air We Breathe

A well-known physician said years ago:

"Excepting troubles resulting from physical violence, every physical trouble can be traced to the impurity of blood supply of the body. Blood is the agent that gives life to every cell in the body, and the health of every individual cell depends on the quantity and quality of the blood that nourishes it."

"The quantity and quality of blood depend on the food and on the air we breathe." Then the doctor (who is an eminent metaphysician as well as a physician) urges us to drink two quarts of pure water daily and to BREATHE DEEPLY.

BREATHE often, deeply and long. Deep breathing acts as a message for the internal organs.

Two great stress cannot be laid on the important part the MIND PLAYS in stimulating the organs of the body to perform their proper functions, he says again. Here is a part of his mental formula:

"I am breathing in the air; it is reaching every part of my lung cells. It is creating good, rich blood and supplying every part of my body. Health is my birthright. I am obtaining it from the life essential, nutritious food, pure water and fresh air."

The physician insists that this mental assertion, made with the deep breathing and the purging of pure food, will benefit every invalid and eventually cure any malady.

Thought is a positive dynamic force that takes form in action. But he adds:

"THE BODY REQUIRES THE LIFE ESSENTIALS—AIR, FOOD, WATER—AND ALL THE AFFIRMATIONS OR AUTO SUGGESTIONS OFFERED BY NEW THOUGHT WILL NOT CURE UNLESS the physical body is given proper attention."

And, first of all, comes BREATHE as a life essential.

Here is a Good Rule for Deep Breathing for You

Here is a rule for deep breathing: Take a full long, deep breath that extends the chest and the abdomen. Then hold the chest distended and let the breath go out by drawing the abdomen in and up. Repeat this exercise seven times, and not less than three times daily.

This exercise, done while walking, is earnestly recommended: Breathe through the nostrils; AND MAKE THE MENTAL ASSERTIONS OF HEALTH AND PHYSICAL PERFECTION WITH EACH BREATH. Here is a Rosary to use in breathing. Say mentally:

"This fresh air I am breathing in, is RADIUM. It contains undreamed of power to rejuvenate, build and strengthen. It is filling my whole system; and driving out every undesirable condition. It is bringing me health, quiet sleep and pure blood. It is making my mind clear, and enabling me to do and have whatever I wish."

Think of your breathing exercise as SCIENTIFIC methods of obtaining and keeping health.

Give Deep Breathing a Trial if You Want to Be Healthy

Remember science has declared that the human body is radio-active. And that the lungs must draw in the qualities in the atmosphere which produces this wonderful thing, radium, we know. The brain, which is the seat of radium, must be fed by the blood; and blood must be produced by air; and air must be pumped into the veins by BREATH.

Therefore, whatever your belief, or lack of belief, whatever your malady, or trouble, give deep breathing a trial. Take the exercise three times a day for one month, never missing one day or one time. Make your mental assertions while you breathe. And then take mental and physical stock of yourself at the end of that time, and see if you are not richer in health, in strength, in mind and in happiness.

Col. Astor's Will Raises Great Questions of Public Policy

The will of Col. John Jacob Astor furnishes a text for the advocacy of a much needed revision of the American law of inheritance.

Col. Astor, acting strictly within the law as it stands, bequeaths the vast bulk of his great fortune to his eldest son, with a small fragment of it to his daughter, a smaller fragment to his unborn child, and an income to his young wife of twenty—an income absolutely dependent upon her going through life unmarried.

Without reflecting upon Col. Astor, who was a patriotic and good citizen and a brave man, it may be said that his will is unjust and contrary to public policy. That a widow of twenty on the threshold of life should be forbidden to re-marry on pain of disinheritance, is contrary to the accepted teachings of both church and State. And the vesting of ninety per cent. of a fortune exceeding one hundred million dollars in a single heir, the elder son, is neither good for the youth nor for mankind. Whatever the law that permits such a distribution of a vast fortune, it is unjust and unfair, and should be amended at once.

Women who link their lives with men assume for them and for society the noble and perilous function of child bearing for the race.

Children who come into existence without will or choice of their own for the pride and pleasure of men, and for the perpetuation of a name or a race, are each entitled to better and fairer treatment at the hands of the law and of the men of a country which they so nobly and indispensably serve.

The Boston AMERICAN therefore most earnestly urges the passage of laws by which the various States may restrict to a reasonable extent a man's selfish distribution of his property, and compel him to make proper and equitable provision for his wife and for all of his children.

It would be nothing more than fair and just to pass a law compelling a man to leave to his wife, one-third of his property, and to divide equitably among his children another third of his property, leaving him the remaining third to dispose of as he sees fit. Substantially, this is the just law of Massachusetts.

Although a man cannot, under the present statute, deprive his wife of the income of a one-third interest in his real estate during her life, an absolute right to a clear one-third of all his property would be more equitable everywhere, and Massachusetts has even this right.

Upon the same principle no man should have the right to deprive his children of their equitable or equal interest in his estate, or any one of his children of an equal share.

And a man living during his lifetime upon the full income of his possessions should neither ask nor receive the right to absolutely dispose of more than one-third of those possessions. The State should be the judge as to the justice of the final disposition.

This is justice to the wife and to the children, and would also insure to the public advantage of the community and the State.

We have abolished in our country the foolish law of primogeniture and entail. Our law now forbids keeping a fortune intact longer than "two lives in being" at the time of the testator's death. But by established custom, and moved by a foolish vanity, which cannot in the nature of things benefit the dead, men are still legally able to concentrate their wealth in the hands of an eldest son or to any other favored member of the family.

This operates not only to the injury of other members of the family who may be equally or even more deserving, but to the disadvantage of the State.

It is clearly against public policy to have great fortunes so accumulated and so concentrated, and it is the mission of the law to prevent this accumulation and concentration. No man should be allowed to gratify his pride or his vanity or his spite or his prejudice, to the injury of any member of his family and to the disadvantage of the State.

The One-Chance Men

(Cool Mine Inspectors)

By DAMON RUNYON

MAIN NORTH vomits a fearful roar, and seventy men are in the rotten with a bang; Whites and blacks and a Jap or two, but probably never a living soul. Probably not, but there may be one. Is there a man who will go and see? Swinging a safety lamp he comes, and, God! What a man of men he is! Overboard, capped, and a querulous grin; Bobbing his head as he dives in— Shaving the weeping girls aside: "Don't let them follow me!" Into the dismal pit he goes By the light of the lamp that faintly shows Where the dead lie dead in mournful rows— God! What a man of men he is!

Main North's mouth breathes the breath of Hell, and his guts are rotted with atordynum. But God and the State send a man to see, and he goes looking with a safety lamp. Death lurks there, but it hides its face from a man who passes so carefully. Poking his light in its very eyes—God! What a man of men he is! Dressed and grime to the roots of his hair; Bleared-eyed, bleeding, as he tests the air— Tests the roof, and tests the walls, and notes where the dead must be; Over the falls of treacherous shale; Ears sharp set for a human call— On he goes down the Death wind's trail— God! What a man of men he is!

It's a hundred to one that never a man has lived for a moment after the black But the mine inspector's a one chance man, and he follows that chance from first to last. The women pray at the mouth of the pit as the dead file out so mournfully— Down in the depths he toils for them—God! What a man of men he is! Listens and hopes for a human cry; Feels of the dead as he passes them by— Feels for the tusk of a human heart when the forms stretch silently. Follows a hope however slim: Maps a path through the chaos grim. For the rescue gangs that must follow him— God! What a man of men he is!
